FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1889.

Friends of the Saloon.

THE WHIG should be a little careful how, in its intemperate zeal for temperance, it denounces all who differ from it as friends of the saloon.—Commercial, July 16.

We do not often make mistakes in recognizing the friends of the saloons. In the Commercial's case only forty-eight hours elapsed between the above utterance, and the following editorial in yesterday's issue.

It is a very pertinent fact, to which it may be well to call attention, that the carnival of drunkenness in Portland on the Fourth of July two years ago occurred during a period of stringent enforcement of the prohibitory law, and followed a particularly persistent effort on the part of deputy sheriffs and police to seize all the liquor and close every drinking place in the city. People who talk as though a radical enforcement of the prohibitory law would prevent or diminish drunkenness for any length of time evidently have not observed the workings of the experiment.—Commercial, July 18.

If our neighbor thinks the saloons or anybody else will have any doubt that the foregoing was the utterance of a "friend of the saloons," it curiously deceives itself. The argument that closing the rum-shops increases drunkenness, has often been made before, but it has always been made by the friends of the saloons.

People or newspapers who loudly deny that the enforcement of the laws can be made to diminish drunkenness, do not need to wear any badge in order to be identified as friends of the saloons.

Our contemporary need have no doubt that his position and expressions on the subject of rumselling, are gratefully appreciated by the saloon interest.

We might suggest that its zeal of championship carries it to a dangerous extreme, when it openly counsels the nullification and systematic violation of law by the saloons. For prohibition is the law of our land and the only law in regard to the liquor traffic.

All talk about license laws, in a State where no such laws exist, is encouragement to violation of the laws that all are bound to obey—and such encouragement is given only by the friends of the saloons.

The son of Senator Brown, of Georgia, is an ardent protective tariff advocate. He is a lawyer with a large practice in Atlanta, and is of the opinion that protection is the hope of the new South.

The Lewiston Journal says: Bangor's wealthy people have come down handsomely for that Y. M. C. A. building fund. How the Y. M. C. A. workers of Lewiston would open their eyes if they could accumulate $35,000 for the cause!

An English journal puts the liquor problem in this form: Twenty-five snakes running through the streets, that is free whiskey. Twenty-five snakes gathered into a box, in which twenty-five holes are made by authority of the court, that is low license. Ten of the holes are closed and the snakes all get through the other fifteen, that is high license. Drive all the snakes over to the next town, that is local option. Kill all the snakes, that is prohibition.

The silly yarn about the Republican members of Congress from the South threatening to bolt the Republican caucus if they do not get what they want, has again come to the surface. Representatives McComas, of Maryland, and Wade, of Missouri, and others have ridiculed this senseless story two or three times already, but that does not prevent the Mugwump organs from reviving and discussing it with apparent seriousness.

The Virginia Democrats are in a heap of trouble about the platform they are about to adopt at the coming State Convention, says the Philadelphia Press. It is well known that there is a large protection element in the party. Any resolution which favored free trade as decidedly as the St. Louis platform did would be sure to drive many of these protectionists into the Republican party and make many more indifferent. But, on the other hand, the adoption of a protection plank would be such a glaring inconsistency in the year following the Grover Cleveland platform that the leading Virginia Democrats can hardly bring their consciences to consent to it. It has been suggested that the best way out of the difficulty is not to frame any platform, and there is a strong probability that this advice will be followed. Then the Democratic papers will not be troubled with the defense of a record.

What Protection Does.

A prominent and well-known business man of Boston, who is not a politician or manufacturer, writing to the editor of the Boston Traveller from Interlaken, Switzerland, says "I clip the enclosed article from a Paris paper, as it certainly expresses my views. I send it to you and hope you will give it a place in your valuable paper, that your readers may see that all Europe does not believe in free trade for the United States. If we continue to protect our manufacturers a few years longer we can defy all Europe, and no doubt be large exporters of the same goods we now import." The enclosed slip to which he refers is as follows:

An attempt has been made to estimate—roughly, of course—the increase in wealth and population in the United States since the last census. Allowing for unavoidable inaccuracies, the results arrived at are really marvellous. Wealth has kept pace with population in a surprising degree, so that it may be justly said that, not only is America the most populous of civilized nations, but it is also the wealthiest. A large portion of this wonderful development is of course due to the protective tariff, which has stimulated at one and the same time both production and consumption. It is the protective tariff that has excavated mines, built mills, encouraged the growth of cotton and cereals, and created great centres of industry where none previously existed. A contemporary's estimate of the national growth seems far too moderate, but perhaps it was well to be careful of exaggeration.

Our contemporary says: "It is nine years since the census was taken, and, according to the best statistical returns, the population is now over 65,000,000. The railroad mileage has grown enormously since the last census. A single Territory which produced 3,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1860, has since produced more than any state in the Union—52,000,000 bushels. The volume of business as recorded by the exchanges between the banks in cities outside New York, has grown wonderfully. The increase in the number of sheep is reckoned at 20 per cent, and the increase in oxen is set down at 37 per cent. The consumption of [illegible] increased [illegible] books made [illegible] paper and rubber. The [illegible] the metallic production has been something fabulous, when compared with the census returns of 1860."

Paring Away at Mr. Blaine.

SOME HOPEFUL TALK TO THE PERENNIAL SCANDAL MONGERS OF NEW YORK.

(From the Brooklyn Eagle, Ind. Dem.)

In the absence of fresh topics the gossips at the National Capital once more recur to Mr. Blaine. Mr. Blaine contemplates an early retirement from the State Department. Mr. Blaine does not intend to withdraw. Mr. Blaine's relations with the President are "strained." Mr. Blaine and General Harrison are on excellent terms. Matters have not gone forward to the satisfaction of Mr. Blaine since he accepted his portfolio. Mr. Blaine is eminently satisfied with the course of the Administration. Of Washington City as a place of residence Mr. Blaine is weary. Mr. Blaine looks on the Capital as the most agreeable community in the country. Mr. Blaine is suffering from ill-health. Mr. Blaine was never more rugged and hearty in his life. Mr. Blaine is intriguing for the presidential succession. Mr. Blaine is "out of politics."

To the alert gentleman at the Capital an indulgent people are inclined to concede a good deal in these warm and wearisome days. Candor, however, requires the admission that their reports and prognostications in the Blaine relation are simply grotesque. It would be a refreshing and edifying concession if, just once, they would sit down and tell the truth about the Secretary of State. The unvarnished facts show that Mr. Blaine and the President are on the most cordial terms; that General Harrison is eminently gratified by Mr. Blaine's conduct of the department over which he presides; that Mr. Blaine is dissatisfied neither with his own official acts nor with those of his chief; that he intends to adopt no other course than the performance of his duties until the close of his term. While, perhaps, his health is not of a trained athlete he retains an amount of vigor and physical energy commensurate with his years. His intellectual powers are unimpaired. He is in good spirits and as contented as a gentleman of philosophic traits ought to be. Within a few weeks he will have the pleasure of entertaining the President in his cottage at Bar Harbor. Everything, indeed, point to the conclusion that Mr. Blaine will be enabled, barring the ills to which all humanity is liable to pass through the summer with reasonable comfort to himself and pleasure and profit to his refined and charming household.

That those who differ from Mr. Blaine politically deem it necessary to pursue him with all sorts of ridiculous rumors and reflections is not to their credit. There is nothing equitable, manly, or wholesome in the tactics employed by his more aggressive adversaries. Their performances tend to degrade public controversy to a low plane, to excite irritation where no provocation exists for the display of a churlish disposition and to supply encouragement to scandal mongers of all sorts and sizes in every relation of the human family. To call a halt on immoderate and inaccurate assaults, to wield the instrument of criticism with impartial hand and to prefer fact to fiction is the exploitation of the subject would be much more commendable than to harp continually on the threadbare string of personal abuse and indiscriminate misapprehension. Presumably, Mr. Blaine has become so familiar with this form of attack that he is not in the least disturbed. But indifference on his part does not justify persistence in the contemptible practice of following him at every stage with concerted insult and systematic falsehood.

ITCHING AGONIES.

Every Night I Scratched until the Skin was Raw.

Body covered with scales like spots of mortar. An awful Spectacle. Doctors useless. Cure Hopeless. Entirely cured by the Cuticura Remedies in five weeks.

I am going to tell you of the extraordinary change your CUTICURA REMEDIES performed on me. About the 1st of April last I noticed some red pimples like coming out all over my body, but thought nothing of it until some time later on when it began to look like spots of mortar spotted on, and which came off in layers, accompanied with itching. I would scratch every night until I was raw, then the next night the scales, being in vain did I resort to all the doctors in the country, but without aid. After giving up all hopes of recovery, I happened to see an advertisement in the newspaper about your Cuticura Remedies, and purchased them from from my druggist, and obtained almost immediate relief. I began to notice disappeared one day one, and have been fully cured. And this was three months before I or five weeks was entirely cured. My disease was eczema and psoriasis. I recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all in my vicinity, and I know of a great many who have taken them, and thank me for the knowledge of them, especially mothers who have children with scaly eruptions on their heads and bodies. I cannot express in words the thanks to you for what the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. My body was covered with scales, and I was an awful spectacle to behold. Now my skin is as nice and clear as a baby's.

A BIG SCHEME.

Proposed Railroad Consolidation.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 18. The text of a bill to be introduced at the opening session of Congress, involving the most gigantic scheme of railroad consolidation ever candidly discussed in this country, is now being printed here. A Chicago firm is publishing maps illustrating the consolidation and tracts of country to supply the business.

The fundamental lines makes Boston the metropolis of the continent. The plans include the absorption of the Canadian roads with the American system and the establishment of the greatest railroad power in the world. The Villard system is the only one not embraced in the system, and the Northern Pacific roads and the Canadian Pacific are to be consolidated.

A system is also contemplated, extending from Santa Fe, through the Southwestern States and thence by way of the Pennsylvania coal regions and across the Hudson river at Poughkeepsie taking in the Hartford & Connecticut Western line, with a new road from Tariffville to Springfield. From Boston the originators propose to run a steamship line to Europe furnishing ample accommodations for traffic from the Pacific slope to the largest ports on the European continent.

The projectors state that the members of the Senate are familiar with the scheme and enthusiastic for its prosecution. They will ask a capitalization of $700,000,000. American and English capitalists will join equally in effecting the commercial union and ultimately a political union with Canada.

The consolidation contemplates the ownership of a new ocean cable joining Boston with the German Empire.

The sum of $75,000 has been spent in procuring surveys for maps. Several surveys were begun in 1881, and the plans have been under consideration since then.

Nothing Definite Known in Hartford.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 18. Concerning the great railroad scheme, outlined in the New York Times by special correspondence from Hartford, nothing definite is known. The Case, Lockwood & Brainard Co. say there is no truth in the statement that they are printing such a bill, and know nothing about it.

Each concluded by saying that they would not sign. Gen. Crook reminded the Indians that they were getting more than their land was worth and that they had actually received much more than was promised under the treaty of 1868. He warned them that they would never get better offer. There are no indications that the commissioners are discouraged.

BURNING OF BONDS. Wednesday afternoon Governor Burtlugh and State Treasurer Beal destroyed by burning in the rear of the State House and within the limits of the new addition now being erected, bonds representing on their face two millions eight hundred thousand dollars, says the Kennebec Journal. These bonds were to have been issued under the refunding law of 1887, but were made void by the passage of the new refunding bill last winter authorizing the issuing of registered bonds in their place, hence the old bonds were never perfected by signing. They were placed in a barrel and saturated with kerosene oil, a match was applied and the State House officials and workmen about the addition were treated to a bonfire in the day time. Mr. J. M. Libby superintended the work of destruction.

THE Y. P. S. C. E.

Meeting of the Penobscot County Union in this City.

The meeting of the Penobscot County Union of Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor was held yesterday at the First Methodist church, and there was a good attendance of delegates. The exercises began at ten o'clock with a devotional service, and it was followed by a pleasing address of welcome, delivered by Rev. George D. Lindsay. The topic "What the Society can do for the Sabbath School," was opened by Rev. T. E. Busfield, of this city, and it was followed by the topic, "Is our Society helpful to the Church Prayer Meetings?" which was opened by Rev. B. K. Merrill, of Brewer. This topic occupied the forenoon exercises.

In the afternoon at two o'clock the first [illegible] was held in charge of Mr. Arthur [illegible], the leader. The subject was [illegible] by Miss [illegible]

The topic of the evening was "Our Society, Upon Our Society, and the Good It has Done." Rev. George D. Lindsay read an able paper upon "Has our Society been Helpful to the Church" and a recess of fifteen minutes was then taken. The topic, "Our Appreciation of the Sabbaths of Our Pledge," was opened by Mr. T. E. Miller, of Burlington, and after it had been discussed the topic "Are Local Unions Beneficial?" was opened by Miss Louise Savage, of this city, and discussed by the delegates. With this topic the afternoon meeting was concluded and an adjournment made to the evening.

At 7.30 o'clock a praise service was held and Mr. A. B. Taylor was the leader. The address by V. Richard Foss, Esq., of Portland, President of the State Union, was a telling and ably delivered argument for the good that the Y. P. S. C. E. is doing, and it was listened to with great interest. At its conclusion a testimony meeting was held and one hundred testimonies received. The social reception to the delegates and friends of the Y. P. S. C. E. was held in the church vestries and proved a very pleasant affair. The time was spent in conversation, and passed very enjoyably. The meeting was very successful throughout and will have quite an influence upon the future work of the society.

It was voted to accept the invitation of the Hampden Society to hold the next session in that town in October next.

Funeral Services of the Late Charles G. Sterns, Esq.

The funeral services of the late Charles G. Sterns, Esq., occurred yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, at his late residence on Broadway, and there was a very large attendance of the relatives, friends and acquaintances of the deceased, gathered to pay their last respects. Among those present were very many who are engaged in the lumber business, and other representative, business and professional gentlemen. The floral offerings were very beautiful, profuse and appropriate to the sad occasion.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. George W. Field, D.D., pastor of the Central church, which Mr. Sterns attended, and he performed the burial ceremony in an impressive manner, paying an earnest tribute to the sterling qualities of the deceased. Several appropriate selections were rendered by the Apollo Quartette. W. S. Dennett, Esq., had charge of the funeral, and the bearers were Hon. Joseph S. Wheelwright, Hon. J. W. Palmer, Charles Woodman, Esq., and Hon. C. A. Boutelle.

At the conclusion of the impressive service, the funeral cortege proceeded to Brewer, where the interment took place in the family lot. Masses of beautiful flowers were strewn about the open grave, and the spot seemed a most appropriate resting place for one whose life-work had been so identified with the great river that flows ceaselessly by.

BASE BALL.

The Bangors Downed by the Portlands.

The game at Maplewood Park yesterday afternoon between the Portlands and the home team was attended by a large number and the first part of the game was an interesting and close contest. The home team lost the game through their inability to place their hits and by a few costly errors. They hit the ball hard but nearly always directly at some fielder waiting for it. The Portlands did some timely batting with men on bases, sending them in. The Bangors were slightly off in their fielding and seemed to hit the ball in the air rather too much. Russell pitched a good game, striking out ten men. He was rather wild at times but pitched a speedy ball and with proper support would have pitched winning ball. Hafford held him well but did not throw to second as well as usual. Sweeney covered the first bag in good style and good plays, as well as bad, were made by the other members of the team. For the Portlands, Ruby pitched a fine game, giving his opponents only one hit. He received very good support. Ladd retired from the box after the first inning on account of a lame arm. The Portlands hit the ball hard and are a lively set of players. They were very fortunate in bunching their hits at the proper time. The day was simply perfect for the game. The following is the full score:

PROF. JOHNSON

By WASHINGTON IRVING.

Thus ended this perilous enterprise. The doctor and Mud Sam severally found their way back to the Manhattoes, each having some dreadful tale of peril to relate. As to poor Wolfert, instead of returning in triumph, laden with bags of gold, he was borne home on a shutter, followed by a rabble route of curious urchins. His wife and daughter saw the dismal pageant from a distance, and alarmed the neighborhood with their cries; they thought the poor man had suddenly settled the great debt of nature in one of his wayward moods. Finding him, however, still living, they had him conveyed speedily to bed, and a jury of old matrons of the neighborhood assembled to determine how he should be doctored. The whole town was in a buzz with the story of the money diggers. Many repaired to the scene of the previous night's adventures; but though they found the very place of the digging, they discovered nothing that compensated for their trouble. Some say they found the fragments of an oaken chest and an iron pot lid, which savored strongly of hidden money, and that in the old family vault there were traces of bales and boxes, but this is all very dubious.

In fact, the secret of all this story has never to this day been discovered; whether any treasure was ever actually buried at that place; whether, if so, it was carried off at night by those who had buried it; or whether it still remains there under the guardianship of gnomes and spirits until it shall be properly sought for, is all matter of conjecture. For my part I incline to the latter opinion, and make no doubt that great sums lie buried, both there and in many other parts of this island and its neighborhood, ever since the times of the buccaneers and the Dutch colonists, and I would earnestly recommend the search after them to such of my fellow citizens as are not engaged in any other speculations.

There were many conjectures formed, also, as to who and what was the strange man of the seas who had domiciled over the little fraternity at Corlears Hook for a time; disappeared so strangely and reappeared so fearfully. Some supposed him a smuggler, stationed at that place to assist his comrades in landing their goods among the rocky coves of the island. Others that he was a buccaneer; one of the ancient comrades, either of Kidd or Bradish, returned to convey away treasures formerly hidden in the vicinity. The only circumstance that threw anything like a vague light over this mysterious matter is a report that sprovalled of a strange foreign built shallop, with the look of a piccaroon, having been seen hovering about the sound for several days without landing or reporting herself, though boats were seen going to and from her at night; and that she was seen standing out of the mouth of the harbor, in the gray of the dawn after the catastrophe of the money diggers.

I must not omit to mention another report, also, which I confess is rather apocryphal, of the buccaneer, who was supposed to have been drowned, being seen before daybreak, with a lanthorn in his hand, seated astride his great sea chest and sailing through Hell Gate, which just then began to roar and bellow with redoubled fury.

While all this gossip world was thus filled with talk and rumor, poor Wolfert lay sick and sorrowful in his bed, bruised in body and sorely beaten down in mind. His wife and daughter did all they could to bind up his wounds both corporal and spiritual. The good old dame never stirred from his bedside, where she sat knitting from morning till night; while his daughter busied herself about him with the fondest care. Nor did they lack assistance from abroad. Whatever may be said of the desertion of friends in distress, they had no complaint of the kind to make. Not an old wife of the neighborhood but abandoned her work to crowd to the mansion of Wolfert Webber, inquire after his health and the particulars of his story. Not one came, moreover, without her little pipkin of peppyroyal, sage, balm or other herb tea, delighted at an opportunity of signalizing her kindness and her doctorship. What drenchings did not the poor Wolfert undergo, and all in vain. It was a moving sight to behold him wasting away day by day; growing thinner and thinner and ghastlier and ghastlier, and staring with rueful visage from under an old patchwork counterpane upon the jury of matrons kindly assembled to sigh and groan and look unhappy around him.

Dirk Waldron was the only being that seemed to shed a ray of sunshine into this house of mourning. He came in with cheery look and manly spirit and tried to reanimate the expiring heart of the poor money digger, but it was all in vain. Wolfert was completely done over. If anything was wanting to complete his despair it was a notice served upon him in the midst of his distress, that the corporation were about to run a new street through the very center of his cabbage garden. He saw nothing before him but poverty and ruin; his last reliance, the garden of his forefathers, was to be laid waste, and what then was to become of his poor wife and child?

His eyes filled with tears as they followed the dutiful Amy out of the room one morning. Dirk Waldron was seated beside him; Wolfert grasped his hand, pointed after his daughter, and for the first time since his illness broke the silence he had maintained.

"I am going!" said he, shaking his head feebly, "and when I am gone—my poor daughter—"

"Leave her to me, father!" said Dirk, manfully—"I'll take care of her!"

Wolfert looked up in the face of the cheery, strapping youngster, and saw there was none better able to take care of a woman.

"Enough," said he, "she is yours!—and now fetch me a lawyer—let me make my will and die."

The lawyer was brought—a dapper, bustling, round headed little man, Roorback (or Rollebuck, as it was pronounced) by name. At the sight of him the women broke into loud lamentations, for they looked upon the signing of a will as the signing of a death warrant. Wolfert made a feeble motion for them to be silent. Poor Amy buried her face and her grief in the bed curtain. Dame Webber resumed her knitting to hide her distress, which betrayed itself, however, in a pellucid tear, that trickled silently down and hung at the end of her peaked nose; while the cat, the only concerned member of the family, played with the good dame's ball of worsted, as it rolled about the floor.

Wolfert lay on his back, his nightcap drawn over his forehead; his eyes closed; his whole visage the picture of death. He beckoned the lawyer to be brief, for he felt his end approaching and that he had no time to lose. The lawyer nibbed his pen, spread out his paper, and prepared to write.

"I give and bequeath," said Wolfert, faintly, "my small farm——

"What—all?" exclaimed the lawyer.

Wolfert half opened his eyes and looked upon the lawyer.

"Yes—all," said he.

"What! all that great patch of land with cabbages and scarecrows, which the corporation is now going to run streets and lanes over?"

"The same," said Wolfert, with a heavy sigh and shaking back upon his pillow.

"I wish him joy, that laughs last," said the little lawyer, chuckling and rubbing his hands involuntarily.

"What do you mean?" said Wolfert, again opening his eyes.

"That he'll be one of the richest men in the place!" cried little Rollebuck.

The expiring Wolfert seemed to step back from the threshold of existence; his eyes again lighted up; he raised himself in his bed; shoved back his red worsted night cap, and stared broadly at the lawyer.

"You don't say so!" exclaimed he.

"Faith, but I do!" rejoined the other.

"Why, when that great field and that piece of meadow come to be laid out in streets, and cut up into snug building lots—why, who ever owns them need not pull off his hat to the patroon!"

"Say you so?" cried Wolfert, half thrusting one leg out of bed, "why, then I think I'll not make my will yet!"

To the surprise of every body the dying man actually recovered. The vital spark which had glimmered faintly in the socket, received fresh fuel from the oil of gladness, which the little lawyer poured into his soul. It once more burnt up into a flame.

Give physic to the heart, ye who would revive the body of a spirit broken man! In a few days Wolfert left his room; in a few days more his table was covered with deeds, plans of streets and building lots. Little Rollebuck was constantly with him, and his right hand man and adviser, and instead of making his will, assisted in the more agreeable task of making his fortune. In fact, Wolfert Webber was one of those worthy Dutch burghers of the Manhattoes whose fortunes have been made, in a manner, in spite of themselves; who have tenaciously held on to their hereditary acres, raising turnips and cabbages about the skirts of the city, hardly able to make both ends meet, until the corporation has cruelly driven streets through their abodes, and they have suddenly awakened out of a lethargy, and, to their astonishment, found themselves rich men.

Before many months had elapsed a great bustling street passed through the very center of the Webber garden, just where Wolfert had dreamed of finding a treasure. His golden dream was accomplished; he did indeed find an unlooked for source of wealth; for, when his paternal lands were distributed into building lots, and rented out to safe tenants, instead of producing a paltry crop of cabbages, they returned him an abundant crop of rents; insomuch that on quarter day it was a goodly sight to see his tenants rapping at his door, from morning to night, each with a little round bellied bag of money, the golden produce of the soil.

The ancient mansion of his forefathers was still kept up, but instead of being a little yellow fronted Dutch house in a garden, it now stood boldly in the midst of a street, the grand house of the neighborhood; for Wolfert enlarged it with a wing on each side, and a cupola or tea room on top, whence he might climb up and smoke his pipe in hot weather; and in the course of time the whole mansion was overrun by the chubby faced progeny of Amy Webber and Dirk Waldron.

As Wolfert waxed old and rich and corpulent, he also set up a great ginger bread colored carriage drawn by a pair of black Flanders mares with tails that swept the ground; and to commemorate the origin of his greatness, he had for a crest a full blown cabbage painted on the panels with the pithy motto "Alles Kopf," that is to say, all head; meaning thereby that he had risen by sheer head work.

To fill the measure of his greatness, in the fullness of time the renowned Rasmus Rapelye slept with his fathers, and Wolfert Webber succeed to the leathern bottomed arm chair in the inn parlor at Corlears Hook; where he long reigned greatly honored and respected, insomuch that he was never known to tell a story without its being believed, nor to utter a joke without its being laughed at.

They will visit Paris and London, and while there the little girls expect to be heard musically by well-known European virtuosi. They will return early in October and the girls will resume their studies in the Public School, and their musical education. They gave a very fine book of music to the steamer, Cities of Rome, Book of the Improvisation on the Star Spangled Banner.

The existence of libraries and schools before the exodus was shown by a report at a recent meeting of the Victoria Institute in London. Prof. Sayer, by personal investigation of ancient tablets and inscriptions, found that in the fifteenth century before our era, active literary intercourse was going on throughout the civilized world of Western Asia, between Babylon and Egypt and the smaller States of Palestine, of Syria, of Mesopotamia, and even of Eastern Cappadokia. This intercourse was carried on by means of the Babylonian language and the complicated Babylonian script.

A steamer which arrived at Colombo, recently, from Bombay, via coast ports, reports that at Cannanmore, where she lay two miles from shore, a large number of bees, numbering some tens of thousands, settled on her foreyard, forming a cluster about three feet long by eighteen inches in depth. It was considered inadvisable to attempt to dislodge them before the arrival of the vessel at Colombo, as at each of the coast ports she lay some miles from the shore. But several nights after the third officer, enveloped in a blanket and armed with a hose, climbed the mast and gave the visitors a dash of salt water. The infuriated bees flew about the ship all night in search of their disturber, but not finding him in the morning concluded to quit. They were last seen making a beeline for the northern suburb of Colombo.

Statistics of sleep may not prove anything of importance, but they are interesting. According to statistics prepared in Russia, the need of sleep is greater in women than in men, the duration of sleep being longer, and the percentage of tired morning and evening and of not tired being 3 to 2 and 2 to 3 respectively as compared to the men. Students sleep longer and are less tired than other men. The time needed to fall asleep is about the same in all three classes—20.8 minutes for the men, 17.1 minutes for students and 21.2 minutes for women. In each case, however, it takes longer for those who are frequent dreamers and light sleepers to fall asleep than persons of opposite characteristics.

Do not be induced to take some other preparation when you call for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Be sure to get Hood's, which is peculiar. 12

The continued use of mercury mixtures poisons the system, causes the bones to decay, and brings on mercurial rheumatism. The use of S. S. S. forces impurities from the blood, gives a good appetite and digestion, and builds up the whole human frame. Send to Swift Specific Company, Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga., for Treatise on Blood Diseases. 7

All scurf and tartar disappear
From mouth and teeth, though dark and dry;
And all become fresh, pure and clear,
If we but Sozodont apply.
That magic wash—all now confess—
Gives to the mouth new loveliness.

AN IMPORTANT ELEMENT

of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar head line "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who detests the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

KISSED ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE.

"You! scoundrel!!" yelled young Jacob Green,
At his good neighbor, Brown,—
"You kissed my wife upon the street,—
I ought to knock you down."
"That's where you're wrong," good Brown replied,
In accents mild and meek,
"I kissed her, that I've not denied,
But kissed her on the cheek—
Because she looked so handsome—the very picture of beauty and health. What is the secret of it?" "Well," replied Green, "since you ask it, I will tell you; she uses Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I accept your apology. Good night." "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy for the delicate derangements and weaknesses of females. Sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee of giving satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it returned.

For biliousness, sick headache, indigestion, and constipation, take Dr. Pierce's Pellets.
